

N. Y. TROOPS GET PROTECTION FROM MILD PARATYPHOID

Base Hospital at McAllen Will Care for All Cases That May Appear.

By Joseph Jordan.
(Special From a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)
HEADQUARTERS, NEW YORK DIVISION, McALLEN, Tex., Aug. 30.—Work is being hurried to complete the new base hospital at McAllen in order that a laboratory may be installed whereby cultures may be made from suspected cases of paratyphoid in the New York division. Seven of these cases have already developed and forty men have been transferred from Mission to San Antonio, where the exact nature of the fever from which they are suffering can be determined.

As soon as the new laboratory, under Capt. George F. Lull, of the regular army, has been established here, it will be possible to isolate and treat such cases locally. Paratyphoid, which is of the same general nature as typhoid, although milder, has often been called "walking typhoid," and although all cases which the division has handled so far have come from Mission, where paratyphoid appeared in a company of the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry as long ago as last April, Col. William S. Terriberry has been advised by the physicians in St. Luke's Hospital in New York that Private Robert McConkey Butt, orderly to Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer, who was sent home ill, was suffering from a reaction of paratyphoid. This is the first case of the kind to appear either in McAllen or El Paso, and the medical officers would be less apprehensive of its spreading to these points if it were not that all the nine infantry regiments which have made the hike have camped over one night at Mission. BELIEVE DISEASE IS DUE TO UNCONSCIOUS "CARRIER."

It is the belief of the division surgeons that there is some "carrier" of the disease in Mission, who is obdurate and employed at some place where food or drink is served, and that from this individual all the six cases in the Fourteenth, one in the Sixty-ninth and two in the Twenty-eighth Infantry have been contracted. That these have all come from the same source and that the fever has never been endemic at Mission has been learned from the fact that every case has been diagnosed as "typhoid" or the milder form of paratyphoid. If the fever had been the result of any given physical condition, there would inevitably have been one or two cases of cases among those which have been taken to St. Luke's Hospital. The officers are therefore satisfied that the illness have all come from the same source.

Private Capt. Lull, three first class privates and seven privates have been detailed from the medical department at Fort Sam Houston to serve as attendants and instructors in the new base hospital at McAllen. They are in charge of First Class Private Henry S. Martin. Three of the men have been called in from the army reserve.

The town authorities of McAllen, co-operating with the military police, have inaugurated a vigorous cleanup campaign extending to kitchens, restaurants and all public places which might become breeding and distributing points for the disease. Mission experienced a similar campaign within the last fortnight, while at El Paso Brig. Gen. William Wilson has ordered all drinking water to be boiled. This is merely a precautionary measure, as no typhoid or paratyphoid cases have as yet developed there. The water supply of McAllen is immune from surface contamination, since it comes from wells the shallowest of which is 200 feet deep. FIRST REVIEW OF AN ARTILLERY BRIGADE SINCE WAR.

Brig. Gen. William S. McLean will hold a review of the artillery brigade at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning. This, according to the staff officers, will be the first time that an artillery brigade review has ever been held in this country, while the New York brigade is the first artillery brigade to be organized since the Civil War. At that time, moreover, an artillery brigade was little stronger than a modern battalion. The shortage of horses will restrict both the first and second regiments to four first batteries and six caissons from each. Each will have a mounted band.

Secretary of War Baker made his appearance here a few nights ago, not in the flesh, but in the movies. Usually, the movies are pretty affairs down this way, the gentlemen handling the exchanges evidently believing anything is good enough for the soldiers. But the pictures never fail to get some kind of a rise out of the enlisted men. The picture of the Secretary of War was no exception. Across the screen was flashed the caption: "The Man of the Hour."

"Wilson!" shouted some of the soldiers. "Hoover!" roared a chorus. Then they showed Secretary Baker in Washington and for a brief moment there was a pause. Then, with a roar like the new well known business of the 18th, came the answer: "Ho!" cried the soldiers and there were yells of derision. "Come on down here!" "Come to the camp, we'll show you!"

"Oh! you man of the hour!" "Drop in and take lunch with us!" "Try some of our home-made jam!" And then, their force spent, the soldiers sat back and burst into hissing laughter at their own expense. Henry Ford, the peace apostle, was next seen cursing a car with a detail, not a few of the soldiers just passed him up. But when Roosevelt was shown in Detroit, the id blow off and the roof was in danger of doing likewise. "The Colonel hadn't really thought about it, but admitted it was a matter which must be attended to. He mentioned one lieutenant and then concluded that another might better answer the purpose. The big private put forward a very stiff leg and "bounced" toward the Colonel.

"Well, now, I tell you how it is, Colonel," he said. "You see, I've got water on the knee and I ain't able to get around much. And there's my bunkie, he was kicked by a mule in the left ankle, and he can't get around much, either. And I was thinking that if you was to put me on Post No. 1, where there don't have to be much walking, an give me Bill for my relief."

"I see, I see," returned the Colonel. "That's very thoughtful of you. Now, without giving any offense, I'll just see what other cripples are in camp, and we'll fix them all up for the night."

"And if I could fall in right at the post instead of going to guard mount, that would be a kind of saving on me and Bill, and I was thinking, too, that if instead of taking two hours on and four hours off, me and Bill could take six hours at one stretch, then we could get our proper rest and it might do us both good."

And Col. McLean, who is the kindest hearted of men, smiled up to the big private and said he would see what arrangements could be made. And the big private saluted and, putting his best leg forward and dragging the water-laden knee in the rear, hurried to tell Bill of the benefits of experience and diplomacy in the army.

CARRANZA ORDERS CATHOLIC CHURCH PROPERTY SEIZED

State Will Take Over the Churches, but Priests Will Continue Services.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 30.—Gen. Carranza, in a decree made public today, announced the nationalization of property of the Catholic Church in Mexico.

The churches will be nominally controlled by the clergy. The government, however, reserves the right to police them and prevent them from being used for any purposes other than prescribed by law.

The government also reserves the right to discontinue their use as a place of worship after one year's service.

In taking this step the First Chief declared he was only reviving the decree promulgated in 1859. The new order involves all property nationalized under the Juarez law and loaned to the Catholic Church or other religious bodies or ceded after the promulgation of the decree.

The Department of Finance will take charge of the property and see that it is cared for. The Department of Government will control the opening of new churches.

Only the Chief Executive of the republic is empowered by the decree to decree the use of Catholic property for any public service. This provision was made to prevent local municipal officers from invading church property. The local municipal authorities are specifically warned not to transgress.

In the event that any place of worship is legally closed, the Treasury Department and Department of Government will take an inventory of the ornaments, images, etc., delivering to the clergy all articles except those belonging to the church prior to the law of 1859. These being of artistic and historic value, must be ceded to the Department of Public Instruction for exhibition in museums, libraries and other institutions of learning.

HOW THE ICEMAN CAME TO RUB THE GLAMOR FROM CHIEF OF POLICE

This Tale From Pompton Lakes Is of Offended Dignity and a Back Yard Scrap.

If there is any glamor attached to the office of the Chief of Police of Pompton Lakes, N. J., it would seem, from current report from that hamlet, to have been considerably rubbed off by a local ice man. And in place of the glamor the Chief is wearing today the dull and homely tints of two black eyes. He is not wearing them outdoors, however, the current report continues, but in the dim privacy of his bedroom. The ice man is the only one going around with any glamor. And this is the tale:

RAINCOAT MAKERS WIN PARTIAL VICTORY

All Firms in Manufacturers' Association Surrender—Independents Still Defiant.

William Martin, counsel for the Waterproof Garment Makers' Union, announced last night that all firms which are members of the Manufacturers' Association have granted the demands and the men have returned to work. About 8,500 employees of independent makers are still on strike.

Union leaders of the makers say that thirty-five firms have signed their agreement and that seventy-five factories are still affected. There are 8,500 men still out.

Miss Jennie Aronowitz of No. 14 Mesquite Street, Brooklyn, appeared before Magistrate Charles Sullivan today to complain against a man who, she claimed, assaulted her last Friday when she was doing night duty in front of a bus factory on Woodland Street. The Magistrate adjourned the case until to-day.

A bookmakers' union has been formed in Brooklyn, and organizers say a demand for a 25 per cent. wage increase, with recognition of the union, will be made within a few days. A strike affecting all the factories in Kings County will be the alternative.

The members of the Traveling Sheet and Bedding Workers' International Union, who strike today, 12,000 workers striking, J. V. Lumbach, president of the Leather Goods Union, said that sixteen manufacturers were willing to give in. The workers demand shorter hours, higher wages and the abolishing of Saturday and Sunday work at home.

T. M. Foster, organizer of the Hardware Union, said last night that over 8,000 shops are now displaying union cards.
